Subject 1, Female, 30, Singaporean. Major in media science.

Tested May 2, 2022

Subject 1 viewed the website on her laptop. She liked the concept of the website and the color palette. She navigated through the pages and the quiz easily but found some text hard to read. She recommended having a shorter copy for the How to Help page.

Subject 2, Female, 25, Korean. Major in Chemical Bio-Engineering.

Tested May 2, 2022

Subject 2 vied the website through her laptop. She enjoyed the content, but the fonts were too big and therefore hinder the experience. She was not sure about the color indicator of the quiz. She did not know blue meant she was correct. But she said the quiz was easy to follow.

Subject 3, Male, 27, North American/Western. Major in sound recording.

Tested May 2, 2022

Subject 3 viewed the website through his phone. He liked the gradient and the animal images which he said were nice and large. He found it difficult to navigate from the end of the how to help page to the other pages since he had to scroll up to the navigation bar. He recommended adding buttons at the end of the how to help page that links to the quiz and homepage.

Subject 4, Female, 21, Korean. Major in Psychology.

Tested May 2, 2022

Subject 4 viewed the website through her phone. She liked that the website not only teaches about sea creatures but also how to help. She also enjoyed the full gradient background as it resembles the color of the ocean. Although she was able to do the quiz, she recommended making the quiz easier since this website is for kids.

Subject 5, Female, 28, Mexican. Major in Project Management.

Tested May 2, 2022

Subject 5 viewed the website through her laptop. She liked that most of the pages just required you to scroll through the images and information. She liked that you find out the right answer to the question immediately after selecting it. She recommended fixing the gradient since it was not consistent, sometimes it would get cut off midway through the page.
